Raise Your Ebenezer

In I Samuel 7, we read the story of how Samuel, following a miraculous Israelite military victory over the Philistines, raised a stone, which he named Ebenezer, "stone of help," as a means of remembering God's faithfulness. As he raised the stone, Samuel said, "God has helped us every step of the way." (1 Samuel 7:12, NIV Reader's Version).

On April 25, 2014, the Board of Trustees raised an Ebenezer stone on LCU's campus to help us remember God's faithfulness and to recommit the university to God's purposes. The dedication ceremony proved to be a memorable moment as the LCU Praise Choir sang Dr. Byron Rogers' beautiful arrangement of "Be Thou My Vision" and as together the assembled crowd sang "O Thou Fount of Every Blessing." You can read more about the dedication ceremony in this issue of Reflections

The raising of our own Ebenezer reminded me once again of LCU's distinctiveness. Imagine having a governing board that wants to put in place a tangible reminder of our dependence on God and our ultimate trust in His care and providence. Extraordinary.

The LCU story is captured by words like faithfulness, sacrifice, and vision. And this issue of Reflections seeks to share a few stories about the remarkable folks who are at the heart of LCU, past, present, and future. People like Dr. Michelle Kraft, alumna, art professor, author, and leader, and Perry Silvey, an alumnus whose remarkable career with the New York City Ballet got its beginning with the profound influence of LCU professor June Bearden. We also tell the story of one remarkable day in the life of LCU — March 1, 2014 — to provide a snapshot of the scope and scale of activity happening at your alma mater.

As we plan for the future of LCU and dream about what's ahead, we do so secure in the knowledge that God is faithful. God is good. All the time.

Hannah (Collins) Dean ('09)

currently pursuing an M.F.A. in painting at Texas Tech University, cannot say enough about the influence of Dr. Kraft during her undergrad work at LCU: "Dr. Kraft assisted many students [by helping us present at I national and regional conferences, such as the National Art Education Association conference. where we, as a class panel, discussed [our] "Art Theory and Criticism" project. These functions not only developed a strong record of professional involvement, but they forged bonds throughout the art education majors, as many of us alumni who participated together are still in contact. Through Dr. Kraft's involvement and commitment to her program and her students, I graduated from LCU a prepared professional in education, artistic practice, and service."

Many of Dr. Kraft's students have gone on to teach in the public schools in grades K-12. Th y are known as dedicated teachers themselves, and they credit Dr. Kraft for their success. She often visits former students in their classrooms when they want advice or help with a problem. She has been asked to judge art competitions or to lecture in several schools - all because she has formed successful mentoring relationships with her students that they want to continue after they graduate.

THROUGH DR. KRAFT'S INVOLVEMENT AND COMMITMENT TO HER PROGRAM AND HER STUDENTS, I GRADUATED FROM LCU A PREPARED PROFESSIONAL IN EDUCATION, ARTISTIC PRACTICE, AND SERVICE.

Jennifer (Rogers) Easterling ('07)

who now teaches art at Bryan High School in Bryan, Texas, has much to say about Dr. Kraft's influence on her life: "Dr. Kraft was my undergraduate advisor. From the very beginning, she expertly guided me through the process of expanding my vision of the world and the Arts, leading to my Bachelor of Arts in Visual Communications. Dr. Kraft continually encouraged my pursuit of my love of the arts through our interactions on campus, during classes, art events, and excursion to Italy. As a mentor, she instilled in me a desire to teach and share this passion with others. She also inspired me to continue with my education. Dr. Kraft was instrumental in supporting and guiding me through obtaining a graduate degree in Art Education at Texas A&M University, as well as into my professional teaching career. Without her, I would not have had the success I have experienced in my career. I am now privileged to call her my colleague and friend."

Because Dr. Kraft understands the importance of scholarly research in her role as a teacher, she is committed to her role as a professor in her fi ld. She is a frequent participant in regional and national scholarly conferences. She encourages student participation in her research and encourages her students to publish. Even though she has a busy teaching schedule and serves as assistant dean to the Hancock College of Liberal Arts and Education, she knows that research and writing and publishing are the marks of a true university professor. One of her most recent accomplishments has been the publication of Including Difference: A Communitarian Approach to Art Education in the Least Restrictive Environment, co-authored with Dr. Karen Keifer-Boyd (Pennsylvania State University). The ook has received some outstanding reviews.

Dr. Kraft and Dr. Keifer-Boyd went through a rigorous review process through the National Art Education Association to get their proposal accepted before they began writing the book. NAEA is a leader in educational research, policy, and practice for art education. Because of their book and other publications, Dr. Kraft and Dr. Keifer-Boyd were invited to serve on the Kennedy Center's and VSA Art's National Coalition for Core Art Standards Special Education Review Committee in August 2013. Dr. Kraft's participation in such projects at the national level is a strong indication of the respect she enjoys with her colleagues across the nation.

LCU looks much different today than it did in the 1990s, but one thing is sort of the same. LCU recently fin shed a facelift on the old motor pool building, which used to house some of the art classes that Michelle took as an undergraduate. Than s to fundraising efforts by Dr. Kraft and Dr. Laurie(Lawlis'82) Doyle, chair of the Department of Communication and Fine Arts, LCU won a substantial grant from the CH Foundation and the Helen Jones Foundation that refurbished that space into a beautiful new art studio and an additional gallery for the campus. Students have made the new space their own, by sponsoring SMASH (Second Monday Art Studio Hoedown), hosting students from across campus in fun art experiences.

At LCU, we believe that teaching, mentoring, and scholarship work in conjunction to provide opportunities for our students to learn and dream about where their paths will take them. Dr. Michelle Kraft exemplifi s that faculty member who truly makes a difference in our students' lives.

arlier this summer, the LCU community lost one of its most cherished friends to a battle with cancer. He was a much-beloved member of the LCU family for a number of years, most recently as a mailman delivering packages around campus. What Gordon Cargill was most known for, however, was the particular way he was among us: always with a smile, a word of encouragement, a word from Scripture, or a prayer. At Gordon's final chapel address, he received a standing ovation from the LCU family for a job well done, but far more importantly for a vocation well lived.

At LCU, we spend a signifi ant amount of time reflecting on vocation. For many, this term is a functional substitute for "job" or "career." And who hasn't heard that the primary aim of going to college is to get a job? However, as committed as we are to preparing our students for professional life, we steadfastly believe that there is a far greater end to Christian higher education than getting a job. For us, the term vocation (from a Latin word for "calling") does not indicate merely, or even primarily, a job or a career. It indicates that we live in response to a God who called us into existence and continually calls us forward into ever-increasing participation with Him.

A Christian view of vocation requires, though, that we are careful not to turn this God-centered idea of "calling" into a profoundly me-centered idea. In this case, God is approached as a means to what is in store for me (my calling) rather than as the very goal to which I am headed and the One to whom I am presently responding. So before seeing vocation as some thing we do, it might be helpful to first unders and vocation in reference to how we live: in a posture of careful attention to God, the Caller.

Moreover, it is possible for our understanding of vocation to become elitist. If our account of vocation is not genuinely accessible to those without finan ial or educational resources, then it is not broad or deep enough to bear the name of Christ. When we think of vocation primarily in terms of "important" jobs to which God may be calling us, we miss something crucial. The p imary "calling" the New Testament addresses is the general calling to be in Christ, to be holy, to be children of light.

Certainly, God does sometimes call people to specifi or important tasks, and we at LCU help students do the challenging work of prayerfully discerning what God may be doing in their lives. But our primary aim is not to help them become more focused on themselves and what it is God is wanting to give them. Instead, we encourage them to foster an abiding attentiveness to God for its own sake and not simply as an instrumental means toward a particular career.

We also want our students to do more that just "give back a little" to the poor or to the church. We pray that they receive their entire lives from God as a gift, just as Jesus did—a gift not to be selfishly kept or greedily consumed but to be given away for God's glory! THAT is the difference that a thoroughly Christian education can make, a difference of eternal signifi ance. At LCU, we are thankful for people like Gordon (and many others) who teach us daily what it means to live out of a deep sense of vocation—called to a life in Christ, not merely to a job in life.

A CELEBRATION OF

CELEBRATING SCHOLARSHIP

The cholarly work of LCU faculty done outside of the lecture halls, seminar rooms, and laboratories on campus is fundamental to the mission of Lubbock Christian University: "to educate students, imparting values for scholarship and for living." The Celebration of Scholarship is an annual publication of the university that represents the kinds of efforts made every year by LCU teachers and scholars. By remaining active in academic life at the local, national, and international levels, our faculty are better equipped for their lives of service within the LCU community.

LCU has a long-term reputation of faculty engagement with their students. The d dication of faculty members to their students and to scholarship in their disciplines make LCU educators distinctive and unique. It is this difference that, in turn, makes the experience for our students a one-of-a-kind, life-changing experience.

Below is a small sampling of faculty scholarship that takes place annually on the LCU campus. To view an exhaustive list of books, articles, reviews, conference presentations, performances and exhibitions from this past year in the digital copy of the Celebration of Scholarship visit www.LCU.edu/13FacultyAwards.

WILSON EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING AWARD

The p estigious L.R., Sr. and Ruth Wilson Excellence in Teaching Award was presented during the spring commencement to Dana Reeger, associate professor of Education and coordinator of campus involvement, and Tracy Mack, assistant professor of Business. L.R. Wilson was a distinguished proponent of Christian education and a person whose lifelong example illustrates the personal and professional mission of changing lives. Th s award was established by LCU trustee, Dr. Ray Wilson, in honor of his parents L.R. Wilson, Sr. and Ruth Wilson. Each year the award is presented to two faculty members at spring commencement for their commitment to living out the mission of changing lives through their work in Christian education.

Reeger has served LCU for more than 10 years as a professor in the education department. Her background experience as a classroom teacher, special education teacher, and educational diagnostician has equipped her for teaching courses in early childhood and special education. During her time at LCU, Reeger has been recognized in the Who's Who of American Teachers, and she has served as a counselor for the international honors organization Kappa Delta Pi and sponsor for the women's social club Kappa Phi Kappa. Reeger is a board member of Literacy Lubbock and a member of the LCU Faculty Senate.

Mack has been teaching in the Business Administration department at LCU for 20 years. He often uses the knowledge he gained as a treasury analyst for Conoco Inc. to teach his students about finan e. While at LCU he has taught courses in Corporate Finance, International Trade and Finance, Business Policy, and Money and Banking among others. Mack coordinates the LCU business internships and serves as the faculty advisor for LCU's Enactus team, an international non profit organization that allows the students to pursue entrepreneurial endeavors.

DR. KENNETH HAWLEY Travels to Harvard

Dr. Kenneth Hawley, professor of English, was invited to present a paper on Boethius at Harvard University's "Revisiting the Legacy of Boethius in the Middle Ages" conference on March 13. Dr. Hawley's paper, "With help of god be sentence schal I saue: Redeeming the Meaning in Walton's Boethius," focuses on the religious, philosophical, and literary dimensions of John Walton's 1410 Middle English all-verse translation of Boethius's "Consolation of Philosophy."

Boethius was a philosopher, politician, theologian, mathematician, and musician in the early 6th century. After being accused of treason and stripped of all he once had, Boethius wrote what would become his most widely read text, "The Con olation of Philosophy." "Boethius's influen e can be seen throughout the Middle Ages and the Renaissance," says Dr. Hawley. "Th's conference allowed scholars from a wide variety of fi lds, disciplines, and backgrounds to reflect upon the deep and lasting legacy that Boethius has left."

DR. JULIE MARSHALL Guides Undergraduate Research

A 1989 graduate of Lubbock Christian University, Dr. Julie Marshall, professor of Chemistry, is a significant force in the university's undergraduate research program. The research she has done for J.M Smucker's Co. and Birdsong has created opportunities for LCU students. For the past ten years, students under the direction of Julie Marshall and other faculty have participated in undergraduate research projects to solve real world problems for companies such as J.M. Smucker's Co. and Birdsong Peanut Co. A cutting-edge laboratory with advanced equipment was put in place for students to have hands-on experience with the types of instrumentation and materials commonplace in graduate school and industry. More than 40 students have served as undergraduate research assistants in this lab launching them into careers, graduate or professional school. During this time over $1.5 million in funding has been obtained for equipment and student, faculty, and university support.

DR. MARK SNEED Authors Books

Dr. Mark Sneed, professor of Bible, is a world-class scholar in Old Testament wisdom literature, specializing in the book of Ecclesiastes. He is the editor of two books Concepts of Class in Ancient Israel [Scholars Press, 1999] and The Politics of Pessimism in Ecclesiastes: A Social-Science Approach [Society of Biblical Literature, 2012], with two more on the way, The Social World of the Sages [Augsburg Fortress, 2015] and Is There a Wisdom Tradition? New Prospects in Israelite Wisdom Studies [Society of Biblical Literature, 2015].

Dr. Sneed has published numerous articles and often reads papers at the national meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature and the well-known professional and academic organization for biblical scholars. He has been extended the prestigious honor of presenting at three Society of Bible Literature sessions. In Chicago at the 2012 SBL Conference, the Wisdom in Israelite and Cognate Traditions section had a conversation about Dr. Sneed's scholarship and work in wisdom literature. In other words, the entire session was dedicated to Dr. Sneed's ideas about this Old Testament genre.

DISCOVERED MY LIFE'S DASSIGN AT LCU

n 1965, Perry Silvey began his freshman year as a math major at what was then LCC, a junior college. He is now the Technical Director for the New York City Ballet. How does a person who has a knack for mathematics come to hold one of the most important positions in one of the top ballet companies in the world? It begins with recognizing your passions and following your dream.

LCU continues to be a place where students can be involved in a great variety of co-curricular activities, but with a smaller enrollment at the time, students could try their hands at multiple activities. So even as a math major, Silvey became very involved in the drama department and its productions over the two years he was at LCU. These in the theater production not only did the acting, they also built the sets and helped with the costuming.

During the 1966-67 academic year at LCU, Silvey was cast as Starbuck, the lead in 110 in the Shade. He received the Best Actor Award for a different role, The Golem, when Dr. June Bearden took the play to competition. Silvey describes Dr. Bearden as "one of the two or three best teachers I've ever had" over his lifetime, and Silvey credits Dr. Bearden with helping him set the course for his tremendous professional success.

The on of a retired army officer, Silvey took a test to be in the navy as he was graduating from LCU. Knowing that he was seeking direction, Dr. Bearden recognized his natural gifts for acting and drama production, so she suggested he pursue a degree in drama. She helped him acquire a small scholarship from the University of Texas, where he earned a bachelor's degree four years later.

Silvey tried acting for a while in Dallas in summer musicals and dinner theaters. He moved to California to begin a community theater in Santa Cruz. When it did not prove successful, he drove across the country to New York City in 1974 with no job and no prospects for one.

A friend told him that he could get on with the "Night Gang" at the Metropolitan Opera. This crew would work all night after a performance to break down the stage set and rebuild a new set for the next performance. He began working at night while still auditioning during the day for all kinds of acting parts.

He later interviewed with the Martha Graham Dance Company and was hired first o be the stage manager and then the production stage manager, which involved productions in NYC and around the world. He was then invited to join the New York City Ballet Company in late 1976 as the assistant stage manager.

Semiretired now, Silvey spent the bulk of his career with the NYC Ballet, ultimately serving as the technical director. Over the course of his life he was blessed to work with and learn from three major, internationally recognized choreographers:

- Martha Graham whose influen e on dance has been compared to Picasso's influen e on modern visual arts.
- George Balanchine who co-founded the NYC Ballet and has been dubbed one of the 20th century's most prolific and amous choreographers.
- Jerome Robbins who choreographed productions ranging from classic ballet to contemporary musical theater including numerous works such as "Peter Pan," "The King and I," West Side Story" and "Fiddler on the Roof."

But, Silvey considers Dr. June Bearden as the person who helped prepare him for his successful career in the arts because of the insightful instruction he received from her at LCU. She taught her students to consider that one of the greatest things about theater is the opportunity

"What she taught us about creativity and discipline works in all aspects of life — even for those who may not have gone into theater. We learned so much from her about life lessons that are applicable to every endeavor," says Silvey.

Silvey's journey from LCU in 1965 to now "has been delightful; I've been so fortunate – to be born in the family I was, to have had the opportunities I've had, to have worked with so many talented people in my career, to be at the pinnacle of this industry," Silvey relates. "I could never have planned this. I went and took a test to be in the Navy. Mrs. Bearden said, "Why don't you try drama," and I decided that was a pretty good idea."

"What young person says they want to be a production stage manager as a career choice? I was presented the right opportunities at the right time that matched my experience. Hard work was rewarded with more opportunities. Pretty soon you are busy doing what you are good at, and it ends up being what you love to do."

"It is exciting to feel like you are contributing to a 400-year tradition and making it alive, not just replicating what was before. Bringing something new and fresh to the old traditions of ballet and theater is really art. Mrs. Bearden knew that, and she shared that life-changing insight with us."

Distinguished Alumnus of the Year

Dr. Evertt Huffard ('69)

VP/Dean of Harding School of Theology at Harding University

Dr. Evertt Huffard serves as chief administrator for the Memphis, Tennessee, campus of Harding University, academic dean for Harding School of Th ology, and professor of leadership and missiology. He has been teaching leadership and missions for 28 years. Prior to his work at Harding, Dr. Huffard served as associate professor at Pepperdine University.

"Dr. Evertt Huffard embodies the very best about Lubbock Christian University. He is a devoted husband and father, a teacher, scholar, minister, leader, and bridge-builder," remarked LCU President Tim Perrin. "We give thanks for his signifi ant influen e for good in the Kingdom through his training and mentoring of a generation of ministers and Biblical scholars, all to God's glory."

His cross-cultural experiences began as a teenager when his parents moved to Jerusalem, Jordan, in 1963. He returned to the USA in 1967, and after graduating from Lubbock Christian University (A.A.), Harding University (B.A.), and Harding School of Th ology (M.A. and M.Th.), he erved a church in Nazareth, Israel, and taught Bible at the Galilee Christian High School. He completed a Ph.D. in Inter-Cultural Studies at Fuller Th ological Seminary with a focus on the Muslim-Christian encounter. He has ten years of urban ministry experience in Los Angeles, California, and Memphis, Tennessee. He lectures on leadership, missions, biblical archaeology, and the Muslim-Christian encounter.

For a couple of decades he has served as a consultant for church leaders and mission teams across the United States as well as in Canada and Switzerland. He has assisted with international leadership development for mission teams throughout the world and for the past 25 years has taught a course on "Spiritual Leadership." He also teaches a Doctor of Ministry seminar on developing leaders.

Lubbock Christian University and the Office of Alumni Relations present the Distinguished Alumni Awards annually at a dinner during Homecoming and Master Follies weekend. The awards recognize and honor alumni who have made significant contributions toward furthering LCU and its mission through outstanding accomplishments, careers, and extraordinary measures of service.

F.W. Mattox Award for Outstanding Service to the University

Darrell and Anita (Mansell) Price ('69)

Long-time LCU faculty and staff members

Darrell and Anita (Mansell) Price are members of the 1969 graduating class of Lubbock Christian University, which was the last class to graduate with associate degrees. Thy met at LCU, and after graduating, married and then completed their degrees at Harding University in 1971.

Darrell is completing his 39th year at LCU, currently serving as associate professor in the Exercise and Sports Sciences Department. Darrell was the head coach for the men's basketball, track, and cross country teams. During his coaching tenure, he won 11 national track and cross country championships. He was named the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Coach of the Year for cross country and track six times. He was inducted into the LCU Hall of Honor in 2000 and into the NAIA Hall of Fame in 2001. At LCU, he is dearly loved and respected for his Christ-like spirit, and he offers a powerful example in approaching life as mission work.

Anita served as a valued assistant to LCU presidents Lemley, Jones, and Perrin. She faithfully served on staff rom 1990 until her retirement from the President's Office on July 31, 2013. She served as staff sup ort for the LCU Board of Trustees for more than twelve years, working with 41 members of the board. Anita earned the trust, respect, and admiration of the Board of Trustees and served the university with faithfulness, integrity, excellence, humility, encouragement, selfl ssness, kindness, and diligence, beautifully embodying the values of LCU. For her excellent service, Anita received the Board of Trustee Honor Resolution in 2014.

"My years as a student at LCU reinforced the value of having Christian friends in all of life's situations," reflected Anita at the award dinner. "God used those friends, fellow-students, faculty, and staff duing those years, and He continues to use them today."

K.C. Moser Award for Outstanding Service to the Church

Dr. John Knox ('84)

Minister, Granbury Church of Christ

Dr. John Knox has been in ministry for 26 years, faithfully serving the church and his community. After receiving his undergraduate degree from Lubbock Christian University in 1984, Dr. Knox went on to obtain his master's and doctorate degrees from Abilene Christian University.

"I graduated determined to extend to others the same individual care that I received while a student at LCU," refl cted Knox.

Early in his career he served as a campus and outreach minister, adjunct university instructor, and preaching minister. Since 2004 he has served as the preaching minister for Granbury Church of Christ in Granbury, Texas, where he also has served in numerous community volunteer roles. He was recognized by Granbury ISD in 2012 for his faithful service to community and education.

Dr. Knox is continuing his education through LCU in the Master's Program in Clinical Mental Health Counseling. While he pursues his second master's degree, he continues his voluntary role as a law enforcement chaplain, something he's done for 24 years. Currently he is chaplain for the Granbury Police Department and the Texas Department of Public Safety, a victims' assistance volunteer for Mission Granbury, and a member of the Hood County Substance Abuse Council. He was named the Unsung Hero of Hood County for 2013, following the devastating tornado that hit Granbury, for his work with victims and their families.

Distinguished alumni AWARDS

Young Alumnus of the Year Shane Shuttlesworth ('01)

President of Osteogenics Biomedical, Inc.

Shane Shuttlesworth graduated summa cum laude with a Bachelor of Science degree in biology from Lubbock Christian University in 2001. He went on to receive his Master's in General Business with an Advanced Certifi ate in Health Organization Management from Texas Tech University in 2003.

Upon graduation from LCU, he began working as a production manager at Osteogenics Biomedical, Inc., a medical device manufacturer in Lubbock that develops novel dental bone grafting products used by oral and maxillofacial surgeons, periodontists, and dentists worldwide. In 2004, he was promoted to director of marketing and operations for the company, overseeing all marketing, operations, and regulatory activities. Shane was named to his current role of president in 2007.

Shuttlesworth shared, "My professors inspired and nurtured a desire for excellence. They served as great role models for hard work, realizing your potential, seeking further education, and living in service to your community."

While at LCU, Shuttlesworth was named an Achievement Reward for College Scientists (ARCS) Scholar and received the All-American Scholar Award. He was also a member of the National Alpha Chi Honor Society and on the National Dean's List and the President's List.

Shuttlesworth has been nominated for the Texas Tech Rawls College of Business Advisory Council and was appointed to Lubbock Christian University's Young Alumni Advisory Board.

Pat and Gary Estep Award for Outstanding Contributions in the Sciences

Inaugural Recipient: Dr. Gary Estep
Former Dean of LCU's B. Ward Lane
College of Professional Studies

Dr. Estep joined the faculty of LCU in 1971 as associate professor in the Department of Biology. During his tenure, he served as department chair, division chair, and as a full-time professor. In 1988, he became dean of the B. Ward Lane College of Professional Studies and served in that role until July 2009, then as interim dean for a short period of time until his full retirement in August 2013. Th ough the years, he continuously served as one of the health professions advisors and as a board member of the Texas Association of Health Professions Advisors. Th ough his distinguished career with LCU, he considered student advising to be one of the most important areas of service to the university and students. As chairman of the LCU Health Professions Committee, he has been responsible for writing recommendations for students applying to medical, dental, physical therapy, and other health professions schools and has made himself available to current and prospective students as they explore career goals in this area.

"The e is no individual academic success," stated Dr. Estep.
"It is an experience of co-discovery – dedicated faculty working side by side with inquiring student minds."

Numerous alumni who successfully completed postundergraduate work in medical school, dental school, physical therapy programs, and other health-related programs attribute Dr. Estep's guidance and advice as being key to their personal success. Thy equally have a great deal of gratitude for the personal attention and dedication he gave students. It is only fi ting that an award designated for outstanding contributions in the sciences be named after Dr. Estep and his wife, Pat. The steps have been married for 51 years and have made LCU their home and an integral part of their family life throughout the years. They have two daughters and son-in-laws, four grandchildren, a granddaughter-in-law, and two greatgrandsons. Both daughters, Amy (Estep) Hill ('85) and Lisa (Estep) Lindsey ('91), a son-in-law, Mike Hill ('86), and one grandchild and his wife, Ben and Courtney (Snodgrass) Hill ('10), are graduates of LCU. One grandchild, Jesse, is a current student, and the youngest two have their sights set on LCU as well. Dr. Estep and Pat have left a lasting legacy at LCU.

MARCH 1. 2.014 A DAY IN THE LIFE OF

On this day, March 1, 2014, Best Friends was in Houston leading worship at Bammel Church of Christ's youth rally, Soul Link. Nearly 1,500 teens praised God as the musical group represented LCU on the other side of the state.

Best Friends worshiped at the statewide youth rally shortly after the release of its latest CD album, Every Good Thing.

Th t same day, church leaders from across west Texas gathered at South Plains Church of Christ in Lubbock for a one day seminar called ElderLink. ElderLink is hosted annually by LCU and Abilene Christian University for church leaders in the Churches of Christ, which includes elders, deacons, ministers, and spouses. Th's year's seminar focused on the many challenges the church faces in today's culture as it seeks to be faithful in bearing witness to the gospel.

A PERFECT SEASON

Meanwhile, in the Rip Griffin C ter on the LCU campus, Coach Steve Gomez and his team cut down the basketball nets to memorialize the LCU Lady Chaparrals accomplishing the best record in the Heartland Conference. Thy fin shed the conference with a perfect 20-0 record after their 90-66 win over St. Edward's University. The ady Chaps completed the season 25-1 in the Div. II program, making their 23-game winning streak the second longest active win streak among Div. II programs. In addition to four of the Lady Chap starters claiming All-Conference Honors junior starter Kelsey Hoppel set the program record with an NCAA Div. II free-throw shooting mark of 93.8%. March 1, 2014, was the first time in p ogram history that the Lady Chaps have cut down the nets.

SOFTBALL TEAM VICTORIOUS

While the basketball team rejoiced over a record setting victory in the Rip, the Lady Chap Softball team celebrated another NCAA Heartland Conference win at the LCU softball fi ld. The oftball team run-ruled Rogers State University, 10-0, in a five-inning ame on March 1.

Glancing at just one "LCU Saturday," March 1, 2014, we fin students and professors, visitors and fans, athletes and artists, scholars and socializers, all actively being Lubbock Christian University, both near and far.

ORIGINAL SCRIPT CAME TO LIFE

Th t evening an original script authored by two LCU alums came to life in the Christian Development Center Th atre. A year ago Gary Head and Kyle Bullock, 2013 alums, began writing a script about characters who take different routes in dealing with their physical, spiritual, and emotional issues in a play fi tingly titled "Baggage." On March 1, ten students fill d the cast for LCU's second showing of their spring theatre production of "Baggage." Bullock's mentor, Dr. Don Williams, co-directed the show with Dr. Laurie Doyle. Dr. Doyle chose this original script because she believes encouraging developing talent is part of education for both students and alumni.

EVERYDAY ACTIVITIES

In the midst of all the LCU events taking place on one Saturday, regular day to day life continued apace. Students fill d the REC to rock climb and work out, fellowship was enjoyed over meals in the Caf, and peers collaborated on their group assignments in the university library. A glance into one single Saturday shows just some of the various activities and accomplishments that are a vital part of Lubbock Christian University day to day.

uests paid in canned food for entrance into Strike Out Hunger, where they enjoyed hamburgers and hot dogs compliments of Sam's, and participated in games and activities. After watching the Lady Chap Softball team and the Chap Baseball team play, children in attendance had the opportunity to take the fi ld, run the bases, and meet team members. After a day of family fun, LCU Enactus collected 5,174 pounds of food.

Enactus organized this event to fulfill a equirement for the Campbell's Let's Can Hunger grant they received. Grant requirements included putting together two separate projects, one addressing long-term hunger in a sustainable way and the other addressing short-term hunger. Strike Out Hunger is intended to fulfill he second requirement. The first equirement was fulfill d in the fall when Enactus raised money through its day of activities, "Hunger Games," to fund a greenhouse in Kenya.

LCU Enactus, formerly known as SIFE, is an international nonprofit o ganization that brings together student, academic, and business leaders who are committed to using the power of entrepreneurial action to improve the quality of life and standard of living for people in need. As members of Enactus, students are led by advisors and business experts to create and implement community empowerment projects to promote the free enterprise economic system right here in Lubbock.

Such projects include Enactus's finan ial literacy seminar for incoming freshmen, known as Freshmen Money Slam Jam, and a business entrepreneurial competition, ChapTank.

In 2005 the distinctive, bronze Chaparral statue commissioned by Tony and Dolly Gullo was placed in front of the McDonald Moody Auditorium. Wanting others beyond campus guests or those who live, work, and study on the campus to enjoy this work of art, they had a duplicate of the statue created to sit in front of the new Cardwell Welcome Center as well. Both of these statues have become a part of campus culture as student groups decorate them to promote events and as prospective students pose with them after their campus tour.

The gene osity of the Gullos continues with recent gifts that have been used to beautify various aspects of the campus. New sidewalks complemented by new benches and planters as well as lighting fixtures have been added over the past few months. Additionally, a new walking track that surrounds the intramural fillds just east of the Rhodes Perrin Rec Center has been recently completed.

The indness and generosity of the Gullos continues this fall with the construction of a water feature in the central part of the mall. The eature will provide a contemplative space for individuals and space large enough for groups to witness a baptism at one end of the fountain. At the heart of their intent for these projects has been to create, in the words of Mrs. Gullo, "beautiful spaces for LCU students."

students and is the largest class offered at the University of Virginia. Dr. Elzinga's major research interest is antitrust economics, and because of this Elzinga has testifi d in several antitrust cases, serving as the economic expert in three Supreme Court cases. Dr. Elzinga has authored more than 100 academic publications and co-authored three mystery novels in which crimes were solved using economic analysis.

Dr. Elzinga's keynote presentation was titled "Adam Smith: the Free Market and the Christian Faith." He also presented on the Supreme Court and on "Models of Faculty Ministry."

LCU's Scholars Colloquium is a time for selected students and faculty to present their best research in an academic conference setting. Each year, research is presented on poster displays and in oral presentations. In addition, two student plenary speakers are chosen by the LCU Council on Undergraduate Research. Th's year's plenary student speakers, Bryan Hettick and James Masterson, opened the oral presentations for the Scholars Colloquium.

"We are pleased that the quality of the colloquium continues to reflect the truly excellent research of our students and faculty at LCU," Dr. Patty explains. "Our university produces undergraduate research, for example, that is certainly among the best in the nation, as evidenced by the number accepted to present at national conferences as well as on our campus."

Masterson, a senior Youth and Family Ministry major and recipient of the Qualitative Research Award, presented "The E ectiveness of Short-Term Intensive Youth & Family Ministry Internships." When Masterson began his research, he discovered that there was very limited research on internships. Thou h this made for a great research topic, Masterson had to overcome the challenges of starting from scratch.

"What started out as an idea to research ministry internships turned into a passion I never thought could exist," states Masterson. "All my hard work paid off when discovered I had received the Qualitative Award. It helped me to see that I was a better student than I had ever given myself credit for."

The uantitative Research Award recipient and senior chemistry major, Hettick, presented "Quality and Stability of Peanut Oils in Raw Nuts Treated with Ultraviolet Light to Reduce Bacterial Loads."

"Contributing to the undergraduate research program as well as the scientifi community as a whole has been the greatest honor," says Hettick. "Coming together to share research with colleagues is a celebration of learning. Sharing new knowledge fosters a passion for discovery that is an essential part of a growing university."

Masterson was also selected to present at the Texas Tech University Conference of Undergraduate Research. Both Masterson and Hettick were previously selected to present their research nationally at the 2014 National Conference for Undergraduate Research.

RAISING OUR benezer

Come, Thou Fount of every blessing, Tune my heart to sing Thy grace;

The wo ds of this great hymn rang out across the mall of Lubbock Christian University as the voices of students, faculty, staff, and t ustees mingled in harmony.

Streams of mercy, never ceasing, Call for songs of loudest praise.

April 25, 2014, was a sunny and breezy morning. The rowd stood in ceremony and remembrance of what God had done to grow LCU out of a cotton filld sown by men and women with little more than dreams of a Christian university.

Here I raise my Ebenezer; Hither by thy great help I've come;

The loth hiding the freshly etched stone rippled in the spring winds and teased the crowd with glimpses of the Ebenezer stone beneath. Th's monument was erected upon the encouragement of the LCU Board of Trustees in recognition and gratitude of God's unfailing help and faithfulness.

Here's my heart, O take and seal it, Seal it for Thy courts above.

The eremony and the stone's unveiling marked this campus and its future for the purposes of God, because "the Lord has helped us every step of the way." We are grateful for His provision in the past and our continued trust in a bright future for Lubbock Christian University and her students.

EBENEZER [eb-*uh-nee-zer]

male proper name, sometimes also the name of a Protestant chapel or meeting house, from name of a stone raised by Samuel to commemorate a victory over the Philistines at Mizpeh (I Sam. vii.12), from Heb. ebhen ezar "stone of help," from ebhen "stone" + ezer "help."

CVeu Trustees

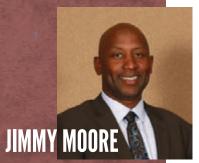

Terry R. Creech earned a Bachelor of Science degree from LCU in 1981. Terry is the CEO of Henry Taw LP, the holding company for the Henry family of companies in Midland, Tex. Terry is also on the board of the LCU Foundation and Midland Christian Schools. He and his wife, Cherie (Stockstill, '79), have two daughters, Kristine Moyer and Katelyn. Terry and Cherie are members of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ where Terry is an elder. The C eeches have helped fund and build orphanages in Kenya, with Cherie traveling back and forth several times a year.

Eldon Schoolcraft is president and CEO of Basin Electric in Midland. Eldon is also on the board of the LCU Foundation and Midland Christian Schools. He and his wife, Sheila, are members at the Fairmont Drive Church of Christ where Eldon is a deacon. The choolcrafts have a son, Cooper ('10), and daughter, Nicole, who attends ACU.

Linda Gaither is an LCU alumna from the class of 1972, the first y ar LCU became a four-year institution. She received a Bachelors in Elementary Education. Linda is a highly successful realtor with Westmark Realtors in Lubbock. She is an active member of the community and serves on the board of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, First Bank and Trust Advisory Board, and Lubbock Area Foundation. Linda is a member of the Broadway Church of Christ.

Jimmy Moore graduated from LCU in 1992 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Kinesiology and in 2000 with a Master of Education degree in Leadership and Administration. He and wife Shelley have two children, Jada and Jalen. Jimmy is the current principal of Estacado High School in Lubbock. He previously was with LCU as director of athletics 2003-2004 and coach of women's basketball in 2000-2003. Jimmy and his family are members of the Greenlawn Church of Christ where he serves as an elder.

The Lubbock Christian University Foundation received a $10 million gift to construct a new nursing building on the LCU campus. The ift was generously donated by the J.T. and Margaret Talkington Charitable Foundation in honor of Margaret Talkington, and it is the largest gift the LCU Foundation has received to date. The n w facility will house LCU's Department of Nursing and the Covenant School of Nursing (CSON). The two ursing programs formalized a partnership in 2011 to benefit uture nursing students.

"Th s is an historic moment for Lubbock Christian University as we celebrate the transformative generosity of the Talkington Foundation. Th s gift will advance our mission of changing lives, strengthen our partnership with Covenant School of Nursing, and enhance nursing education in this region and beyond," stated Lubbock Christian University President Tim Perrin.

"In 2009, Margaret Talkington invited us to her home to discuss the LCU/Covenant School of Nursing partnership and our dream to build a center on LCU's campus to house the two programs," said former LCU Foundation President David Pruett. "We are excited that this building is becoming a reality, and we are so grateful to the J.T. and Margaret Talkington Foundation, the LCU Foundation Board members, and dedicated members of the community, like W. R. Collier, who have made this groundbreaking possible."

"We always knew the partnership between CSON and LCU Department of Nursing would bring opportunities that alone may not have existed," explains Alicia Anger, dean of the Covenant School of Nursing. "One of the most exciting opportunities for students of both programs will be a new building we can call home. Not only will this new facility strengthen the relationship of the existing partnership, but it will provide an environment for students in both programs to blossom, which will, in turn, benefit he people of our region as well."

J.T. and Margaret Talkington served the Lubbock community from 1946-2010 in many ways, including their active support of the Early Learning Centers of Lubbock, the Louise H. Underwood Center for the Arts, Lubbock ISD, and the establishment of the Margaret Talkington School for Young Women Leaders. Along with their philanthropic spirits, Mrs. Talkington was well-known for her high fashion clothing store, "Margaret's." The alkington Foundation seeks to honor the history of J.T. and Margaret Talkington's philanthropic and entrepreneurial endeavors in Lubbock by supporting proposals that enhance the quality of life through arts, culture, community-based education, youth services, and other areas of community improvement. The op ortunity to provide more qualified nurses for the South Plains area made the new nursing building a natural investment and fie, particularly considering Mrs. Talkington's service to the Covenant Foundation and the Talkington Foundation's efforts to support community-based education.

"Margaret named people to the board who she thought would make gifts that she would make when she was living," states Norton Baker, president of the Talkington Charitable Foundation Board. "She started making gifts to this project during her lifetime, and the board is

- 57,000 square feet
- Designed specifically to educate nurses
- Includes classroom, computer labs, faculty offices
- Student commons area
- 500-seat auditorium
- Construction began 2013
- Opens Fall 2015

pleased to continue that with this full $10 million contribution to the [LCU] Foundation. It looks like a project that was made in heaven, and we are glad to be a part of it."

The alkington Foundation gift was a direct result of an initiative of the LCU Foundation and is the largest one-time gift thus far. The L U Foundation works specifi ally on strategic initiatives to enhance the LCU mission of changing lives. The L U Foundation has taken on the name Momentum to signify what is at the heart of their mission – building on the momentum of each successful project to create exciting opportunities for the university and its students. Along with the initiative to develop the partnership between Covenant School of Nursing and LCU's Department of Nursing by raising funds for the new center for nursing education, the LCU Foundation is also pursuing strategic initiatives for a new science building and for the LCU in Washington internship program. It is also providing support for the transition of LCU Athletics from NAIA to NCAA Division II.

DFW Area BECOMES More BLUE

Ten months ago Lubbock Christian University began a targeted approach to have a greater presence in the Dallas/Ft. Worth area. Approximately 25 percent of LCU alumni live in and around the DFW metroplex. Additionally, the students from the DFW area comprise a signifi ant part of the LCU student body. As a part of this approach, Vance Reaves ('85) was hired to represent LCU as university advancement coordinator for the DFW region. His primary responsibilities are to focus on recruiting students, making connections and building relationships with alumni, and working in the area of development.

Vance is well-suited for this position. He graduated from LCU in 1985 and after completing a graduate degree at Texas Tech he began work at LCU in the Marketing/PR and Alumni offices. His connections with people during that period have allowed him to renew old associations and develop new relationships with alumni and friends of the university in the DFW area today. "One of the best parts about my position: I get to become reacquainted with people God brought into my life many years ago. It's like having a reunion every week," Reaves stated. For 15 years Vance worked with LCU's Camp Champion. He has witnessed many of the students who attended as campers ultimately become students, and then alumni of LCU. "As I talk to students and families about coming to LCU, more and more I meet students whose parents were counselors or attended Camp Champion," Reaves shared. "It's great to hear and tell the stories from those days at camp. Lubbock Christian University had a major impact on my life; and now I am enjoying being able to share with students how their life might be changed, if they would consider coming to LCU."

In 1993 Vance and his family moved to Dumas, TX, to serve as a youth minister, and in 2002 they moved to Allen, TX, and continued in ministry until 2013. Vance and his family continue to live in Allen. He is married to Jana (Morgan, '87), and they have four children: Aislyn, Maddie (LCU sophomore), Elyssa and Levi.

"I grew up around Dallas and although my friends decided to attend schools closer to home,

I chose Lubbock Christian University.

I wouldn't be here if it weren't for the encouragement of two people—my youth minister who is an LCU alum, and a long-time family friend who works for the university. They both talked to me about the school and planted seeds of interest in my mind. When our friend encouraged me to attend an LCU basketball camp my freshman year, I saw fir thand how generous and welcoming everyone at LCU is, and I fell in love with this university. During my official visit, the professors and students were extremely nice and so excited to have me here that I immediately felt welcomed. Although I received offers from other schools, I knew LCU was going to be my home away from home." - Kaley Lokey, Class of '17

Porywaidecfo

Pory Waide ('93) has been appointed LCU's chief finan ial officer (CFO) and vice president for Financial Affairs, beginning July 1. He is replacing Tia Clary who has taken a position with CoNetrix.

Rory is returning to LCU after serving as the executive director of accounting and Budgeting for Oklahoma Christian University, where he was responsible for overseeing all budgeting and accounting functions. As a certifi d public accountant, he spent more than seven years as the controller for Greater Atlanta Christian Schools, and has 13 years experience in the public accounting sector, including tenures with fi ms in Lubbock and Levelland.

In 1993 Rory received a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting from LCU. All his university activities centered on accounting and academics, where he was president of Alpha Chi National Honor Society his senior year, an accounting tutor, and an accounting intern for a local fi m.

Rory and Lynne (Cartwright) have two daughters, Ashley and Bryanna, and enjoy family movie/game nights, hiking and camping, Denver Broncos football, and classic muscle cars.

"I'm very excited to be returning to my alma mater," Rory comments, "to serve alongside a great team of faithful individuals that strive daily to make LCU a better place, and strive to have a meaningful impact on every student that calls LCU home. I thank God for this opportunity, and will do my best to be a faithful steward for LCU."

BILLIE'S FAREWELL WEST COAST PRINCESS CRUISE October 2014

It would be impossible to estimate the number of trips and miles that University Tours Director Billie Shuttlesworth has traveled. She has a 40+ year history with the University, serving since 1974 in various capacities in the Financial Affairs and Advancement offi es. For the past 20 years she has facilitated friends and alumni trips, but Billie has decided it's time to retire. Billie is loved by so many and has numerous friendships she has developed over the years with alumni, university friends, travelers, and Impact campers, so what would be more fittin than honoring Billie with none other than a University Tour!

Make plans now on your October calendar to join LCU in honoring Billie on a West Coast Princess Cruise—departing from Los Angeles, with a stop at Catalina Island to enjoy the Mediterranean climate, varied landscape, and shopping. After a day at sea, the next stop will be Ensenada, Mexico, then back to Los Angeles. Of course, there will also be plenty of time on the cruise ship to join Billie in her famous card games!

This particular trip is offering two travel options—flyin into Los Angeles or traveling by bus to and from Los Angeles.

If you are interested in the cruise, contact Billie Shuttlesworth, at billie.shuttlesworth@LCU.edu or 806-720-7216.

LCU Alumni Directory Project

Did you know that LCU Alumni Relations has approximately 20,000 alumni and former students with contact information in our database? We know that many, many of those records have changed and are no longer valid due to relocations, phone number changes, email changes, name changes, and a variety of other reasons. Additionally, there are more than 7,000 records that are completely inactive because we have lost contact.

LCU had previously partnered with Harris Connect to produce alumni directories in 1987, 1999, 2003, and 2008. Given our prior history and success with Harris Connect, Alumni Relations has once more entered into an agreement to produce a new directory for 2014-2015. The p oject will take up to nine months to complete and will yield a publication that includes the following:

EDITORIAL SECTION: 10 pages; 15 photographs (in color)

THROUGH THE YEARS SECTION: Alumni-generated photographs with captions and presented by decade

CLASS YEAR/BIOGRAPHICAL SECTION: Alphabetical by primary class year, short 300-word essay about life since graduation

GEOGRAPHICAL SECTION: Alphabetical by state/city and class year

ALPHABETICAL INDEX: Alphabetical by last name and class year, lost and deceased denoted

A general likeness of a post card that will be mailed out to homes of members of our alumni community is shown for your reference. Watch for the post card that will give response options and more information about the project. You can have confiden e that the company and project has been approved by LCU and Alumni Relations.

Staying connected with one another strengthens our alumni community as a whole. Please note that there are no direct costs to LCU for this project. Books are being sold by the publisher and all proceeds go directly towards the cost of research, data collection, and publishing. Watch for project updates in future editions of the LCU alumni email newsletter, eNotes.

LCU CONTINUES SUCCESSFUL TRANSITION TO NCAA DIVISION II

BY CHRIS DUE AND WARREN MCNEILL

The ubbock Christian University Athletic Department has successfully completed year two of NCAA candidacy and now begins the Provisional Year in its NCAA Division II membership process.

The university egan its transition from NAIA to NCAA Division II during the summer of 2012. Having successfully navigated the previous two years of candidacy, the university was informed by the NCAA Membership Committee of the approval to move forward into the final y ar of the three-year process.

"LCU's transition into NCAA Division II has been smooth and successful due to the commitment and dedication of the entire university community," said President Perrin. "We express our appreciation to the NCAA for advancing the university to the provisional year, and I give thanks for the leadership of Paul Hise and his team in expertly directing this effort. We look forward to completing the candidacy process and fulfilling our ision of developing a model Division II program."

"Th s is another important step in our transition to become full NCAA Division II members," LCU athletic director Paul Hise added. "We are anticipating another great year from our student-athletes in the competitive arena, as well as in the classroom, and are hoping that by this time next year we will have completed our transition and are full NCAA Division II members."

The 2013-14 eason was the first or LCU as members of the NCAA Division II's Heartland Conference. Th Chaparrals and Lady Chaparrals had success in their inaugural run in the Heartland Conference, as all seven of the team sports that produce a win-loss-or-tie result finished with a combined 164-53-1 overall record and a 105-22 record in conference play. All seven of the programs also fin shed third place or better in the conference standings, including four teams which fin shed with the best regular season conference record.

For full LCU Chaps athletic coverage go to www.LCUChaps.com.

ALL 7 teams FINISHED 3rd or better IN THE NEW CONFERENCE.

As a provisional member of the NCAA, LCU has been ineligible for NCAA postseason play, which will continue for the 2014-15 seasons. But a recent rule change will allow individual student athletes to be eligibile for additional conference and national honors during the upcoming season.

The p ovisional year will run during the 2014-15 academic year and an evaluation will occur to determine if the institution is ready to become a full-fl dged member of NCAA Division II. Like last season, LCU will participate with a full NCAA and Heartland Conference regular season schedule during this upcoming school year.

LCU is one of six schools (seven were in the process) moving on to the provisional period en route to active membership in the 2015-16 academic year. The chool joins Daemen College, Lee University, Northwestern Oklahoma State University, Oklahoma Christian University and the University of Virginia's College at Wise.

"The Masters program in Bible at LCU equips you with the tools for interpreting Scripture responsibly, enables you to write more effectively, argue a case more persuasively, and think more carefully and profoundly. I strive to bring the Bible to life by exposing students to its languages and literature and the culture in which it was created. All of these factors will enable you to go back in time and enter the world of the Bible with its characters, and, in a sense, come into contact with their very thoughts. This will provide greater clarity and comprehension of the biblical message, which will have significant ramifications for every aspect of your life and ministry." — DR. MARK SNEED

An expert in social science approaches to the Hebrew Bible and a leading scholar in wisdom literature, Dr. Sneed has published in numerous international and prestigious journals and anthologies. He has spoken at the Judaic Studies Workshop at Rice University and served as an offi er in the Society of Biblical Literature, for which he is also a regular presenter. What is the K.C. MOSER ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP?

K.C. MOSER WAS A TRANSFORMATIONAL PRESENCE

on the LCU campus from the mid-sixties to the mid-seventies in the early days of Lubbock Christian College. His scholarship and conviction of God's grace through Jesus and his extensive knowledge of the book of Romans made him a well-loved LCU faculty member, forever changing the lives of LCU students.

Moser authored several books, including The Gist of Romans, one of his most popular. His teachings on grace were controversial at the time. In an era when teachings in Churches of Christ centered on "the five-step plan of salvation," Moser would respond, "It's the man not the plan" referring to man's salvation by grace through faith in Jesus Christ.

MOSER'S MEMORY AND LEGACY ARE HONORED EACH YEAR as the LCU College of Biblical Studies and Behavioral Sciences hosts the K.C. Moser Ministry Conference. The conference invites ministers from all over the country to the LCU campus for challenging and meaningful presentations on a variety of topics relevant to the Churches of Christ today.

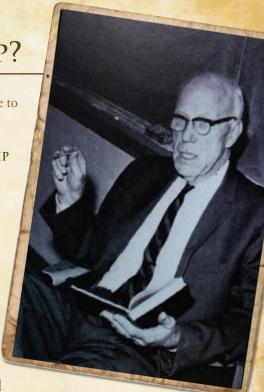

Moser passed away in 1976, and in 1977 his wife, Ardis Moser, established a scholarship to honor Moser's life.

His family continues to give to this scholarship.

THE K.C. MOSER
ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP

is awarded yearly to a ministry major who excels in Bible, Missions, or Youth Ministry at Lubbock Christian University.

The scholarship endowment continues to grow through generous gifts from family, friends, and former students. These gifts ensure Moser's legacy of excellence in ministry will live on through the ministry of these bright and talented students.

EVERY DOLLAR COUNTS...TWICE!

Friends, we have a challenge before us, and the clock is ticking. For the next year, every dollar that you donate towards the new James and Jeanette Ling Science Center will be doubled. A generous alumni couple has pledged to match every gift that you contribute up to $1,000,000. Where else can your $25 become $50? Or $500 become $1,000?

Just as F.W. Mattox stood in a cotton field and dreamed of a Christian university that we now call LCU, we can see our students working in modern labs, learning about ecology, and making discoveries through research. With your help, we can raise the remaining funds needed to begin construction—not just of a building, but of dreams for a brighter future.

This dream can only become a reality if we work together. Every gift is important, and we ask for your help. Thank you for your commitment and support.

SHARING A

1.800.933.7601

As we began to make plans for the future of our estate, we knew that we wanted to share our blessings in a way that would really make a difference. Throughout the years, we've seen the way that Lubbock Christian University changes lives by providing skills for students to excel, not only in their professional lives, but in their families, churches, and communities.

That's why we've decided to include LCU as a beneficiary in our will. We hope that our gift will help LCU continue in its commitment to Christian education and impact students from around the globe.

GORDON CARGILL, 87, passed away June 27, 2014. He spent 17 of his "retirement" years at LCU, until his failing health no longer allowed that in fall 2013. Gordon started with LCU cleaning floors in the science building, but he always humbly told people he didn't just scrub the floors, he prayed for the students, faculty and staff that walked those halls. Later he became the campus mail deliverer and would spread encouragement as he made his rounds. One of his greatest pleasures was serving others. Gordon was loved by all that encountered his acquaintance and he was a popular chapel speaker sharing his Godly life wisdom and his genuine love for LCU and the students. In April of 2014, LCU established the Gordon Cargill Spirit of LCU Award as a means of honoring Gordon's legacy. The award recognizes each year a member of the LCU faculty or staff for their servant's heart and encouraging spirit. In a very selfless, Gordonlike fashion in the days before his passing, Gordon asked that mourners make donations to a memorial scholarship fund to support LCU students in the Biblical Studies department rather than send flowers.
